Keep Current with Email Alerts

Did you know you can get magazine, journal, and newspaper articles from the library databases sent directly to your email? Whether you want to know whenever a new scholarly journal article is written on a topic you’re interested in (maybe you want to know whenever new research on global warming is available or you just want to be informed every time Britney Spears does something newsworthy), or if you want to be alerted every time a new issue of your favorite journal is available, email alerts are easy to set up. There’s an entertaining video tutorial available on the library’s faculty services webpage to show you how to set up alerts, or of course, you can contact your librarian for help.

Wow! Ever since I set up email alerts using the library databases, things have really turned around for me! Thanks, ARC librarians!

Charlie Thomsen, Geography Professor, uses email alerts to keep current.
The ARC Library: it's not just for students any more!

Reading Recommendations from ARC Faculty

My two top picks: A Brief History of the Dead by Kevin Brockmeier, and especially the wonderful The Book Thief by Markus Zusak. Book Thief actually made me cry at the end, which is not easy to achieve! Good reads!

Joan Kruger
English

Actually, I find reading to be old fashioned. These days, I put books on a flash drive, swallow the flash drive, and let my intestines absorb all the nutrition.

David Merson
English

Editor’s note: Wash the flash drive thoroughly before reusing!