We offer a broad study of the fields of written and spoken language. The English division of the college includes courses in composition and technical/professional writing (ENGWR), literature (ENGLT), reading (ENGRD), creative writing (ENCCW), and education (ENGED), the descriptors in parentheses being the prefixes used in listing these courses in our catalog and schedule.

In addition to our self-contained, “regular-classroom” classes, we also offer day and evening writing classes conducted entirely in our two computer classrooms. Furthermore, we have four very effective support programs: Reading Center, Writing Center, RAD (Reading Across the Disciplines) (/student-resources/campus-tutoring-programs/reading-across-the-disciplines-(rad)), and WAC (Writing Across the Curriculum) (/student-resources/campus-tutoring-programs/writing-across-the-curriculum-(wac)). All four programs are housed in our, 18,000 square-foot Learning Resources Center, located next door to Davies Hall, which houses our core English programs.

This course is a study of the structure of English grammar, both descriptive and prescriptive. It includes the study and practice of traditional grammar and standard usage, with emphasis on the relationship to writing (2000 word writing requirement) and the teaching of language arts; it also includes an introduction to the history of the English language as it relates to irregularities in modern English. This course is designed for those who plan to teach or who are especially interested in grammar as it relates to writing.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

• evaluate the effectiveness of commonly used semantic, morphological, and syntactic definitions of parts of speech
• identify the various grammatical structures used in English, such as phrases, clause types, and sentence types
• create examples of the various grammatical structures used in English, such as phrases, clause types, and sentence types
• explain grammatical structures, sentences types, and movement tests used in traditional English grammar
• distinguish between standard and nonstandard usage as applied to writing and correct common writing errors in English grammar, punctuation, orthography, usage, and convention
• apply the principles of traditional English grammar to writing and writing instruction
• design an audience-appropriate grammar lesson plan
ENGED 320 Service Learning: Tutoring Elementary Students in Reading

This course covers basic methods of tutoring elementary school children reading below grade level. The class meets on campus for the first part of the semester for tutor training. Students are then placed at a nearby elementary school for in-depth practice tutoring elementary children in reading. This course offers field experience for teacher preparation.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- evaluate elementary students’ reading and comprehension skills using a variety of assessment techniques
- develop appropriate strategies to motivate students, modify behavior, and enhance reading skills
- design lesson plans incorporating activities for the improvement of fluency and reading comprehension
- critique children's literature for its quality and reading level appropriateness
- demonstrate interpersonal communicative skills with diverse student populations

ENGED 324 Introduction to Elementary Teaching with Field Experience

This course introduces the concepts and issues related to teaching diverse learners in today's contemporary schools, kindergarten through grade 12 (K-12). Topics include teaching as a profession and career, historical and philosophical foundations of the American education system, contemporary educational issues, California's content standards and frameworks, and teacher performance standards. In addition to class time, this course requires a minimum of 45 hours of structured fieldwork in public school elementary classrooms that represent California's diverse student population, and includes cooperation with campus-approved certificated classroom teachers.

This course is not open to students who have completed ECE 350.
Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify academic requirements and experiences needed to become a credentialed elementary school teacher
- evaluate attitudes, actions, behaviors, and responsibilities that define the role of a professional educator in a public school setting
- demonstrate objective, descriptive, and interpretative observation skills
- analyze learning theory through planning, teaching, and interaction with elementary students
- examine and assess issues concerning diversity in elementary student backgrounds, interests, experiences, and abilities
- identify school and community resources that address issues concerning diversity
- develop a personal preliminary philosophy of teaching, examining personal characteristics, assumptions and beliefs, and experiences which could affect development as a teacher
- apply course content to classrooms through structured assignments, observations, and reflections

This course analyzes expository and argumentative essays, textbooks, and literature in preparation for ENGRD 310 or ENGRD 312 and other transfer-level classes across the disciplines. It emphasizes recognition of an author's thesis, supporting details, point of view, purpose, and tone through an in-depth analysis of an essay's structure. This course also focuses on applying study strategies for comprehending and retaining information from textbooks in preparation for tests. Individual work in the Writing Across the Curriculum Program, the Reading Across the Disciplines Program, or the Reading Center may be required.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- analyze words contextually and structurally
- apply the reading process such as SQ3R, PRO, and BWA to textbook selections
- apply appropriate annotations, notetaking, and mnemonic techniques
- analyze the structure of expository or argumentative essays
- identify an essay's stated or implied thesis, primary and secondary supports, and pattern of organization
- critically analyze an author's purpose, tone, bias, and point of view
- distinguish fact from opinion and claim from premise in an argumentative essay
- analyze literature or narrative non-fiction to identify elements of fiction such as setting, plot, characters, conflict, and theme
- infer authors' tone by identifying connotation, denotation, and figurative language
ENGRD 117 Reading Center: Individualized Support Skills for ENGRD 116

This course offers instruction in intermediate reading skills. It provides supplementary practice to students who are concurrently enrolled in ENGRD 116. Pass/No Pass only.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- distinguish author’s tone using inferential comprehension techniques
- differentiate organizational patterns in expository or persuasive essays
- apply note-taking strategies to textbook selections
- implement inferential comprehension techniques in expository and persuasive college-level selections

ENGRD 310 Critical Reading as Critical Thinking

This course covers the theory and practice of critical and speed reading skills needed for successful academic performance with an emphasis on the following: (1) critical and analytical evaluation of college-level expository and argumentative essays, (2) development of flexible reading rate and speed, (3) critical analysis and evaluation of independent research, (4) vocabulary development, and (5) application of these skills to multicultural essays, journals, fiction, and nonfiction reading.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify thesis statements, stated or implied in college-level essays and articles.
- analyze content to determine major details and patterns of development.
- assess critical comprehension elements in written arguments: inference, fact and opinion, judgment, tone, bias, style, and purpose.
- evaluate the logic of arguments in college-level texts, focusing on propaganda, assumptions, faulty analogies, non-sequiturs, and deductive and inductive patterns.
- evaluate the quality and sufficiency of evidence and other forms of support for a written argument.
- create effective and efficient study reading strategies for college-level material such as annotating, outlining, mapping, and summary.
- assess reading strategies appropriate to regulate reading rate depending on reader's purpose and varied college-level materials.

This is an honors course in critical reasoning, reading, and writing, requiring a high level of competence in English composition. Complex texts—essay and book-length works—reflecting a variety of social, cultural, and historical contexts are read, discussed, and analyzed. Although this course focuses primarily on non-fictional texts, selected works of fiction may be included. This course focuses on the writing of formal academic essays which include primary and secondary research; MLA format is required for all essays, and a minimum of 6500 words is required for the course. Group and individual class presentations are required; at least one essay assignment requires independent reading. This course is not open to students who have successfully completed ENGWR 302.

Student Learning Outcomes
Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- analyze the social, cultural, and historical contexts of various texts
- compose summaries of various texts
- evaluate texts for logical and emotional content
- evaluate content information for accuracy and credibility
- compose essays that integrate a variety of texts which reflect differing points of view
- compose essays that effectively address audience expectations
- reason inductively from examples, patterns, themes, and structures to form generalizations reason deductively by drawing conclusions about the meaning of specific details, words, or phrases demonstrate familiarity with a variety of schools of critical and rhetorical theory demonstrate appropriate documentation of sources

demonstrate a sophisticated and effective style and vocabulary

ENGWR 495 Independent Studies in English - Writing

| Units:  | 1 - 3 |
| Hours:  | 54 - 162 hours LAB |
| Prerequisite: | None. |
| Transferable: | CSU |
| Catalog Date: | June 1, 2019 |

Independent Study is an opportunity for the student to extend classroom experience in this subject, while working independently of a formal classroom situation. Independent study is an extension of work offered in a specific class in the college catalog. To be eligible for independent study, students must have completed the basic regular catalog course at American River College. They must also discuss the study with a professor in this subject and secure approval. Only one independent study for each catalog course will be allowed.
